

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and process for authentication of a party in transaction conducted over a communication network using authentication keys embedded in a portable physical medium in the possession of the party plus a password entered by that party that are compared against a data base by an authentication server.